SUPPLEMENT

1. The present Slovak Democratic strategy of making the drafting of the new constitution so difficult that elections will be necessary is, [REDACTED] a serious blunder. [REDACTED] nothing could serve the Communists better than to have the new elections result in the formation of a coalition government against them. 25X1X6

2. [REDACTED] many prominent non-Communist political leaders in Czechoslovakia are very anxious to have the National Front continue exactly as it is today, since the Communists can effectively be called to account for their political and economic errors only if they are part of the Government. [REDACTED] the Communists would not mind at all dumping the results of their mismanagements onto a non-Communist Government, and then sitting on the side-lines as a critical opposition. 25X1X6
